

People at the Vigil felt betrayed by the hypocrisy of SADC and the African Union. Under pressure from them, the MDC agreed to give the unity government a chance. But the two useless organizations have failed to make Mugabe keep his promises and, when Tsvangirai and Biti asked for financial help at the SADC meeting in Cape Town, suddenly all you could see were ostriches: heads in the dirt and bums in your face.

We were outraged that the African Development Bank had the nerve to demand the repayment of half a billion US dollars in Mugabe debts before further help would be considered. The IMF has always been accused of imposing 'illegal sanctions' for the same thing.

So now we know where we are. The AU and SADC are imposing sanctions on Zimbabwe. But they have generously agreed to ask the European Union and the United States to give more money to Zimbabwe – although these donors are already providing most of the humanitarian aid.

The Vigil believes there is a solution – along the lines of one of our petitions: money for Zimbabwe should be taken out of international monetary support for the SADC countries.

It was another large Vigil and many people stopped to sign our petitions and look at the poster demanding the release of political prisoners.

Some points:

- It was good to meet Steve Garvey, a teacher at the Dolphin School in Battersea. His class of 8/9 year-olds has become very interested in Zimbabwe and is planning a project and fundraiser. Steve was keen to have a Zimbabwean speak to his class.

Vigil team member Fungayi Mabhunu has agreed to go.

- The Vigil was pleased to have Sister Beverly Mutandiro leading prayers again – apologies for getting her name wrong last week.

- First-timer at last week's mock birthday party for Mugabe at the Vigil was Mzamo Ngwenya. She sent us the following email " I was one of your new faces last week. It was so amazing. For the first time in six years I felt very happy and proud to be a Zimbabwean. The welcome was so warm and to meet people with the same passion as me was just an amazing experience. Thank you so much. Keep it up. God bless."

- Also at the birthday bash was freelance journalist Sheena Rossiter with a camera team. They made a video of the event. Check:

- We have been asked by Guardian Films (part the Guardian newspaper group) to publicise their film exposing the horrors of the cholera epidemic claiming thousands of lives "Mugabe splashes out on birthday bash as cholera spirals out of control". Check
